CHAPTER I
INTRODUCTION

This chapter explains background of the study, research problem, research objectives, significance of the study, scope and limitation, and definition of key terms which become the basis of this research.

1.1 Background of the Study

Communication is usually defined as conversation, namely for sending and receiving message. If the message cannot be received it means that communication does not work well. In order to make communication run in harmony, the hearer should know the speakers aim. Moreover, every day we adapt our conversation to different situations. Among our friends for instance, we can easily say something that would be seen discourteous among strangers and we avoid over formally with our friends. In both situations above we tries to avoid makes the hearer embarrassed and uncomfortable.

When people use language to communicate with others, they always want to have a conversation that runs well and goes smoothly because by having a good conversation, they can maintain a good and close relationship with others. According to Wang (2010), speakers have to be able to choose various communicative strategies to maintain a good relationship between both interlocutors and they also need to apply strategies to construct a good conversation. These strategies are also known as politeness strategies.
Culpaper (2009) defines politeness as a strategy that is used by people to build a harmonious communication. Therefore, when somebody tries to have a polite conversation, he or she also has to pay attention to the hearer’s feeling. It is in line with Holmes’ statement (1995) that when people try to be polite, it means that they want to express respect towards the person they are talking to and avoid offending that person. Hence, it is not only important to speak well in terms of linguistics, but also important to think about other’s feeling.

As stated by Brown and Levinson (1987), a politeness theory is based on the concept that people have a social self-image. This sense of self-image is also known as “face.” The theory of “face” itself was developed in 1987 by Brown and Levinson. They state that people use various politeness strategies to protect the face of others when addressing them. In situations where a face threatening act (FTA) could arise, the politeness strategy used depends on how close the relationship between the speaker and the hearer.

Furthermore, Brown and Levinson (1987) stated that there are four politeness strategies which a speaker uses when dealing with FTA to the hearer. They are bald on-record, positive politeness, negative politeness, and off-record. Each strategy is used differently depending on the situations. While in this research the researcher only focuses on the positive politeness strategy which is addressed to the person’s positive face.

Positive politeness played an important role in human life. Positive politeness is not only for one group society, but also it is for everyone in all conditions. Using language is used as their tools in daily conversation in order to make a good social interaction with other people in their life, (Fraser, 1990). Politeness phenomena not only occur in daily conversation, but also in the dialogue found in a drama script. As one example of entertainment media. Drama script is kind of literary work in written version of a story. Drama script similiar to literature and linguistic, presents the dialogues and words that have the meaning.

Medea is one of the interesting subject to be analyze in terms of positive politeness strategies. The researcher chooses this drama script because Medea has won bronze medals and came in third place at the annual Athenian play competition at the Theatre of Dionysus. Furthermore, this drama script tells about the inner emotions of passion, love, and vengeance. Medea is widely read as a proto-feminist text to the extent that it sympathetically explores the disadvantages of being a woman in a patriarchal society. Therefore, the researcher thinks that there are many utterances in the dialogue of this drama script which contains politeness strategies. The data are from the dialogues which contain positive politeness strategies applied by the character in Medea drama script.

Beside the types of positive politenes strategies, the researcher also attempts to find the types violating maxim of cooperative principle in expressing the positive politeness strategies. It is because the researcher aims to analyze the relationship between positive politeness strategies and the violating maxim. Cutting (2002) stated that there are four types of maxim violating. Those are violating maxim of quality, violating maxim of quantity, violating maxim of relation, violating maxim of manner.
There are some researchers who have analyzed politeness strategy: Issabelle Villota, (2013); Eva Indriani,(2014); and Ani Septiyaningsih, (2015). Following these, the research will focus to investigate positive politeness strategies based on Brown and Levinson theory. The researcher will focus on two problems. First is the kind of positive politeness strategies will find in Medea drama script by Euripides. Second, the researcher also attempts to find the type of violating maxim of cooperative principle in expressing the positive politeness strategies in Medea drama script by Euripides.

An analysis of positive politeness has been done by Eva Indriani (2014). She focused her study on Positive Politeness Strategies used by Grace and Meg in Monte Carlo Movie. Her study aimed to find out the types of politeness strategies produced by Grace and Meg in “Monte Carlo” movie. The result shows that Grace as the main character produced the highest number of positive politeness in her utterances compared to Meg. In her study, she collected the data in a movie that was selected by her. Since, this previous research similar with the present study, the researcher aims to continue this research by using positive politeness based on Brown and Levinson theory but using a drama script to be analyzeze.

Another previous study which relates to this present study of positive politeness also has been done by Ani Septiyaningsih, (2015). The research studies use of positive politeness strategy in the film entitled “In Good Company”. It is conducted to find out the kinds of the positive politeness strategies employed by the characters and the factors influencing the characters to employ those strategies in relation to Brown and Levinson’s politeness strategy. The result of the analysis shows that there are 15 strategies of positive politeness employed by the characters in the dialogs of film entitled “In Good Company”. There are two factors influencing the characters when they employ this strategy namely, payoff and relevant circumstances. Concern with payoff, when the speaker employs positive politeness strategy, he can get any advantages. He can minimize the FTA by assuring the hearer that he considers himself to be the same kind, that he likes the hearer and wants to fulfil the hearer’s wants. This is found in the entire of the data. It is also different with this paper because it is can suggest that other researchers not only take a look at the use of the strategy from a different kind of angle e.g. bald on record, bald off record, negative politeness, and positive politeness but also pay intention in combining politeness strategy with other issues for example, is like this papper that will be investigate relationship between positive politeness strategy and violating of the maxim. Finally, the employment of positive politeness strategy by people in daily conversations will make the conversations between them run smoothly. Therefore, a harmonious relationship between one to another will be created in the society.

Furthermore, study of politeness strategies which focused on analyzing positive politeness and cooperative principle has been investigated by Issabelle Villota, (2013). Issabelle Villota’s study focused on the cooperative relavance and politeness principle in jokes became the object of her research. This present study will continue Issabelle Villota’s study by analyzing all kinds of positive politeness strategies which relate to cooperative principle’s theory.
Based on some previous studies above, it is very interesting for the researcher to focus on analyzing positive politeness strategies in relation with cooperative principle especially violating of the maxim as reflected by the characters in Medea drama script based on some consideration. First, according to the object of the research the researcher will use a drama script to do her research. Since, the previous researchers have never analyzed a drama script. Second, most of researchers focused on analyzing positive politeness strategies, but they just analyzed the once type of fifteen kinds of positive politeness itself. Third, the researcher expects that the research can give meaningful contribution to study in linguistic field, especially about positive politeness which is a part in pragmatic.

1.2 Research Problems

From the review of previous studies above, the research problems raised in this study are:

1. What are the positive politeness strategies expressed by the character in Medea drama script?

2. How are the maxim violated happened by the character when applying positive politeness strategies in Medea drama script?

1.3 Research Objectives

Based on the research problems above, this research is intended to achieve two objectives:
1. To find the positive politeness strategies expressed by the character in Medea drama script.

2. To identify the maxim violated happened by the character when applying positive politeness strategies in Medea drama script

1.4 Significance of the Research

The researcher expects that the research could give meaningful contribution to studies in linguistic field, especially about positive politeness which is a part in pragmatic. Pragmatics is a subfield of linguistics and semiotic that studies the ways in which context contributes to meaning. Positive politeness strategies seek to minimize the threat to the hearer’s positive face. They are used to make the hearer feel good about himself, his interests or possessions, and are most usually used in situations where the audience knows each other fairly well. This research is conducted to understand the apply of positive politeness in the Medea Drama Script. Hence, the researcher hopes this research can show about the way Politeness strategies are used to formulate messages in order to save the hearer’s positive face.

1.5 Scope and Limitation

In this research, the researcher will focus only on two problems. First, the researcher identify the positive politeness strategies expressed by the character. Brown and Levinson (1987) list fifteen kinds of positive politeness strategies. Second, the researcher analyze the type of violating maxim in expressing the positive politeness strategies as reflected by the character in Medea drama script.
According to Grice (1975) elaborates the cooperative principles into four sub-principles which is known as maxims. Those are maxim of quantity, maxim of quality, maxim of relation and maxim of manner.

1.6 Definition of the Key Terms

- Positive Politeness Strategy

Positive politeness is oriented toward the positive face of the hearer, the positive self-image that he claims for himself and his perennial desire that his wants (or the action / acquisition / values / resulting from them) should be thought of as desirable (1987). Brown and Levinson (1987) list 15 positive politeness strategies: (1) Notice. Attend to hearer's wants, (2) Exaggerate interest / approval, (3) Intensify interest, (4) Use in-group identity markers, (5) Seek agreement, (6) Avoid disagreement, (7) Presuppose / assert common ground, (8) Joke, (9) Assert knowledge of hearer's want, (10) Offer, promise, (11) Be optimistic, (12) Give (or ask for) reasons, (13) Assume / assert reciprocity, (14) Include speaker and hearer in the activity, (15) Give hints to the hearer (goods, sympathy, etc). Positive politeness utterances are not only used by the participants who have known each other fairly well, but also used as a kind of metaphorical extension of intimacy to imply common ground or to sharing of wants to limited extent between strangers. For the same reason, positive politeness techniques are usable not only for FTA redress, but in general as a kind of social accelerator for the speaker in using them indicates that he wants to ‘come closer’ to the hearer.
- Maxim of violation

  Violation maxim is condition when the speaker says something that makes the hearer not know the true meaning of the utterance. Therefore, the hearer only knows the surface meaning of the utterance. Cutting (2002) describes the maxim violation is divided into four types. There are violation of quantity maxim, violation of quality maxim, violation of relation maxim, and violation of manner maxim.

- Medea by Euripides

  Medea is an ancient Greek tragedy written by Euripides, based upon the myth Jason and Medea and first produced in 431 BCE. Medea is a young princess who falls in love with the Greek hero, Jason, and because of that love betrays her own father, helps Jason to steal the Golden Fleece and flees her homeland. They settle in Corinth and have two children. However, Jason scorns and abandons Medea in order to marry (for political motives) Glauce, the daughter of Creon, King of Corinth. Stateless and alone Medea wreaks a terrible revenge. To repay Jason for his betrayal and cold-hearted defection, the incensed Medea, having made a pact with Aegeus, King of Athens for safe refuge, poisons Glauce, Jason's newly-wed wife, and her father, Creon. Finally Medea kills her own children.
